Feng Shui Charlottetown - The oriental idea of Feng Shui plainly translates to "wind and water." This complicated idea is more easily understood than it is defined or pronounced. Feng Shui has to be experienced so as to completely know its ramifications on the human spirit. The elusive energy known as chi is ever existing and surrounds the meaning and the application of Feng Shui. Though it is intangible, chi is everywhere in the universe and is considered one's aesthetic periphery. Feng Shui reveals itself in our attitudes about landscape and regarding life. It is the framework we place either consciously or unconsciously all-around our lives.

According to the customs in the Orient, object positioning such as buildings, graves and furniture is based on the patterns established through the flow of chi and yin and yang. Together, yin and yang energies generate both positive and negative effects. Feng Shui is made up of five elements. These elements are referred to as earth, wood, water, metal and fire. They blend in their own particular ways so as to create either destructive or positive cycles. In order for optimum Feng Shui to be acquired within a room, all of the five elements will be included without being overpowered by whatever one of them separately.

For example, if contemporary furniture featuring metal is dominating a specific space, the effects can be balance with wood elements. Candles add a fire component if that is desired. When applying Feng Shui as a design feature within anybody's house, it is vital to make use of natural substances when possible. The double aspects of yin and yang always reign supreme in Feng Shui for the reason that the ultimate objective is to be able to produce a harmonious balance between natural items and humans.

Bedrooms are extremely essential rooms in whatever house and it is crucial to have ample energy flow to them. This is vital to the energy flow throughout the rest of the house. Beds themselves are believed to have power places also. Some ancient Asian philosophy states that the energy from somebody who ever slept in a bed leaves a residue. For optimum Feng Shui, the way the bed is placed in relation to the bedroom door must be considered. The door must always be visible from the bed. If the door is not seen from the bed, anyone can make use of a mirror in such a way that it would reflect the door. This would restore Feng Shui.

Feng Shui connects the landscapes and life together and all things in our globe depend upon each other. Eastern philosophies believe that landscapes are breathing and living entities. There are several aspects regarding heaven and earth and humanity that the Western world can consider as people in the east do. Just as Shakespeare said in Hamlet, "There are more things in heaven and earth, my dear Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."
